

2. Political Stability (PV)

Political Stability (PV) captures perceptions of the extent to which political power and governance are secure from destabilization, and of the likelihood that authority will be challenged or altered through violent, coercive, or unconstitutional means.

The table below lists the individual indicators drawn from each underlying data source and incorporated into the revised WGI. These indicators represent the specific questions or variables used to estimate the PV governance scores for the most recent year available. In some cases, question wording differs in earlier years, and three data sources have been discontinued (but continue to be used in the calculation of governance measures for the past years in which they were available). Users should consult the WGI website for a complete list of source-specific data files containing all historical indicators.

Before the data are used in the aggregation model, each question or variable is rescaled to range from 0 to 1, with higher values corresponding to better governance outcomes. When a data source includes multiple questions or variables related to the same dimension, the rescaled values are averaged to produce a single source–dimension input prior to aggregation. This ensures that each source contributes only one signal per dimension and prevents data providers with more questions from being given undue weight.
